Room X	Academics in housing struggles: conflicting identities, priorities setting, the limits of the participation.
	Much of the policy-relevant knowledge on housing issues is produced by universities, researchers often participate to housing struggles in various roles (es. as activists or as residents); social movements and social struggles are themselves an object of enquiry for social sciences. But what the relation between housing and university is (or should be) about?
Room X	Activist performance I
	Preparation of a performance during demonstration. The theme of the Monuments in Action performance is the housing crisis and the gentrification that currently affects the city of Lisbon. The public space will be used as a stage where people create monuments that talk about the community: its history, its social relations, its hopes and fears. How social and political issues can affect how a community is related and, consequently, the public space.

Open air	Neighbourhood in struggle: Visit to 6 de Maio
	Over the last few years, Habita has reported the violence with which the municipality has demolished this neighbourhood, frequently accompanied by the Intervention Police, creating a climate of instability and aggression. In the neighbourhood there remains a small group that has managed to keep united in the struggle for decent housing for everyone, including those who have already been expelled. With this visit, we wish to support the struggle of these residents, a group composed by some still living in the neighbourhood and waiting rehousing and some that, having been evicted, are ling in great need. The purpose of the visit is to share practical experiences on how to stop evictions, and how to foster union among the residents that find themselves in this, often deeply stressful, situation.

Open air	Visit to Lumiar - neighbourhood in struggle
	Alta de Lisboa hosts most of the social housing estates that were built with the Special Resettlement Program of the 1990s, comprising around 5500 municipal homes. However, many of the apartments, managed by the city council, stand vacant (sometimes for years!) at the same time that there exists an acute housing crisis. Many families have candidated themselves for the municipal housing for years, without success. Habita therefore considers legitimate and supports the decision of many residents to occupy and habitate these apartments. With this visit, we wish to support the struggle of these residents, who are mostly women and often single mothers. The purpose of the visit is to share practical experiences on how to defend occupations and stop evictions from social housing, and how to foster union among the residents that find themselves in this, often deeply stressful, situation.

Open air	Visit to Bairro da Torre - neighbourhood in struggle
	Bairro da Torre is a self-produced neighborhood located on the edge of Lisbon's airport, which results from the occupation of a public and partly private location, which origins dates back to the 1960s. In 2011, the Municipality of Loures (CML), under a Special Rehabilitation Program, began a process of demolition of the neighborhood, without any solution for many of the resident families that had not been included in the list held in 1993. Who was on the list was rehoused in neighborhoods, with the support of the Habita, his right to a housing with the CML, being able to remain in the neighborhood, in precarious conditions. In 2014, the Socio-territorial, Urban and Local Action Study Group (Gestual), Faculty of Architecture of the University of Lisbon, was contacted by Habita to collaborate in the search of housing and urban solutions for the current situation of the inhabitants, where about 48 families live. Based on a dialogue with the Association of Residents of the Neighborhood, with the Habita and with the CML Housing Department, the study of the situation of the neighborhood began, and there were also several cleaning and construction activities that their effective qualification and the reinforcement of the residents' self-esteem. However, this initiative was abruptly discontinued in October 2016, with EDP cutting off access to electricity and, more recently, in July of this year, with a major fire that left 35 people homeless. With this visit we want to support the struggle of these residents, sharing the experience of the activists: it would be important to discuss some urgent issues, among others: What is the future of Bairro da Torre? How to guarantee access to a decent housing? How to promote a participatory rehoming process? How to promote the union of the residents, in the face of the continuous and exhausting struggle of resistance?
18.30-20.30	Closing assembly for all attendants, conclusions
